TENNESSEE OSTEOPATHIC MEDICAL ASSOCIATION

It's Monday morning, and have you translated your convention lectures into practice improvement already? Have you amended your electronic health record templates or incorporated some new osteopathic manipulative techniques from our afternoon lecture? Our 121st annual convention exceeded our expectations of attendance, medical updates, and exhibitor participation. Did you learn anything? I did, and I noticed that I was writing on paper at my first convention in 2009, and now I take notes on my telephone. I am committed to adapting to change and look forward to seeing all of us succeed for the next year.

I am Dan Logan, DO, a proud osteopathic family physician and your president. I appreciate Dr. Paul Smith, III for inviting me to my first board meeting back in 2015 and am excited to have stood on the shoulders of the giants before me to continue our fight for patients access to excellent Osteopathic medical care.

Our vision is to be the leading voice for osteopathic physicians and students. We have a captive audience of senators and representatives keenly interested in our perception of the strengths and weaknesses of Tennessee's health care. Over the past four months your leadership has voiced those concerns through the Doctor of the Day program. Have you thought about participating? This year was my third trip sitting with my senator and representative who listened to our position on the future of medical practice in Tennessee. I'm proud to say that I advocated for your right as a fully licensed physician and will continue supporting you.

A special thank you to Betsy Hilt our executive director, Ann Lyn Sholl, who executed a wonderful convention and are actively engaged in recruitment of physicians and students.

Enjoy the beautiful spring weather, and I look forward to working with you representing our osteopathic profession.

SINCERELY,

DAN LOGAN, D.O.
